Nothing – Janne Teller

I firmly believe that there are concepts and experiences far too difficult to put into words; this is not to say they cannot be put into stories. Words are the first level of language and are sufficient for communicating simple ideas, but to consider anything complex we need to move into metaphors, into parables and into stories.

Iraq or Afghanistan, somewhere far far away, but here, in our country.
In War, Janne Teller
embarks on a thought-provoking experiment: by simply turning the current crisis on its head, she reveals what it is like to flee your home country, to be exiled, and to fight for survival in a foreign country. In this illustrated short story, Europe has fallen apart and the only place at peace within reach is the Middle East. You follow a normal British family as they flee to the Middle East and see what they go through as refugees, through the eyes of their fourteen-year-old son. Originally published in Denmark in 2001, War has become more and more relevant and thought-provoking in the intervening years. In addition to the striking format and illustrations, what makes this book so special is that Janne Teller adapts the story for each country in which it is published.

Julia has always been the friend that Livy turns to when life is difficult. United fifteen years ago by grief at the brutal murder of Livy's sister, Kara, they've always told each other everything. Or so Livy thought. So when Julia is found dead in her home, Livy cannot come to terms with the news that she chose to

Julia that Livy knew was vibrant and vivacious, a far cry from the selfish neurotic that her family seem determined to

by doubt but alone in her suspicions, Livy sets out to prove that Julia was in fact murdered.
But little does she realise that digging into her
